RSP FAQ's

1. What does RSP mean? RSP stands for the Random Selection Process, a computer program designed to assign the opportunity to purchase certain limited edition and/or merchandise limited in quantity to Guest(s) based on the Guest's stated preferences. Up to three RSP rounds will be run for this event.
2. How does RSP work? The RSP process always starts with the first item listed in the catalog and moves sequentially through the list of available items. It gathers the names of all the Guests that rank item #1 as their first choice, then randomly chooses the number of Guests from that list equal to the number of available pieces of that item. The chosen Guests are assigned the right to purchase one piece from item #1. If every Guest who has ranked item #1 as their first choice has been assigned the right to purchase that item, and there are still items remaining, the RSP process will gather all Guests that ranked item #1 as their second choice and randomly choose the number of those Guests equal to the number of remaining item #1s. Those chosen Guests will then be assigned the right to purchase item #1. When all of the pieces for item #1 have been assigned, the RSP process will conduct the same manner of assignment for item #2. The process continues in this manner through the Guests' choices and the available items for the three RSP rounds or until there are no longer Guests with stated choices or there are no longer any items available.
3. What is the correct way to fill out the Guest's RSP Preference Sheet? Each Guest should rank the number of the item the Guest wants to purchase most in the field for first choice (using the drop-down box shown below as an example), then the item the Guest wants to purchase second in the field for second choice, and so on. The Guests who are assigned the right to purchase an item may only purchase one of such item; multiple purchases of the same item based on one RSP round is not allowed. If a Guest is interested in purchasing more than one piece of the same item, the Guest can list such item on the Guest's second and/or third RSP preference lists. Such item would be available in any subsequent rounds of the RSP process ONLY IF that item has not been fully assigned to Guests in the previous round(s) of the RSP process. Limit one purchase of any item in each RSP round.

RSP Preference Sheet

1st Choice	18. 60th Anniversary Key
2nd Choice	6. Keys to the Kingdom Box Set
3rd Choice	104. Pandora - Blue D60 Charm
4th Choice	57. Harveys Tote Bag - Dumbo
5th Choice
6th Choice
7th Choice
8th Choice

4. How should the Guest's RSP Preference Sheet be filled out so the Guest gets everything the Guest wants? There is no way to fill out the Guest's RSP Preference Sheet to guarantee that the Guest will receive the right to purchase every item the Guest has listed. The best results usually occur when the Guest decides what items the Guest wants to purchase most and ranks those towards the top of the Guest's list. The Guest should remember to take into account the number of pieces available for each item – higher edition size pieces will probably be available longer so they could be included lower on the Guest's list.
5. Why didn't the Guest get the Guest's first choice? The RSP results depend not only on the edition size of an item, but also on the number of Guests that rank that item as the exact same preference. For example, if 200 Guests rank an item as the Guest's first choice, but there are only 25 pieces of that item, then 175 Guests will not receive the Guest's first choice. Guests who rank that item as the Guest's second choice or lower will not have a chance at receiving the opportunity to purchase such item.
6. If the Guest's first choice is not available, will the RSP system move the second choice up to become the Guest's first choice? No, the system is not designed to change the Guest's order of preferences. The Guest's preferences will always remain exactly as the Guest designates them on the RSP Preference Sheet.
7. Can the Guest be assigned the right to purchase an item based on the Guest's second RSP preference list even if the Guest did not receive the opportunity to purchase that item based on the Guest's first RSP preference list? No. The system does not reserve quantities of any items for assignment in the second or third RSP rounds. Items are only available in the next RSP round if every Guest that asked for it in the prior round was assigned the right to purchase that item and there were still quantities of such item remaining. This is why we ask Guests not to list items in their second or third RSP preference lists unless they are trying to be assigned the right to purchase multiples of that same item.
8. May the Guest submit more than one RSP Preference Sheet? No, the system is designed to accept only one RSP Preference Sheet per Guest. However, the RSP Preference Sheet includes the ability to fill out preference lists for RSP rounds one, two and three. Guests may fill out preference lists for up to three RSP rounds, and there is no obligation to fill out any lists.
